Online panel discussion

Now the government uses the alibi of the virus to go even further in increasing the vulnerability of the employees.

The anti crisis package was nominally proposed by the employers association. The trade unions were never consulted during decision making. The package is beneficial for the side of the capital and does very little for labour. According to labour lawyers the Labour Code has effectively been suspended.

Hundreds of thousands of employees are losing their jobs in various industries, without having any income to fall back on.

Tens of thousands of librarians and cultural institution specialists lost their public servant status, as have employees of numerous universities that are being privatised.

The purpose of the panel discussion is to analyse these tragic developments.

Participants:

Csóti Csaba chairman of Szakszervezetek Együttműködési Fóruma

Kordás László chairman of Magyar Szakszervezetek Szövetsége

Papp Katalin appointed chairman of Közgyűjteményi és Közművelődési Dolgozók Szakszervezete

Pogátsa Zoltán editor in chief of Új Egyenlőség
